

Film Star Who Will Run For Legislature And One Who Plans to Have Her Own Company

whose pinwheel skyrockets and other electric eye-traps break up the line of illuminated corsets, silk thread and Virginia tobacco through the Times Square district.

And a brace of these visitors have allegedly decided to put up some incandescent fireworks of their own.

Brown & Megahan, Colorado exhibitors, are said to have secured a midtown theatre site and will shortly begin the construction of a screen temple as large as any picture theatre yet built or proposed for New York, and more ornate.

My information is that they propose to spend $5,000,000 on their new film playhouse. Brown & Megahan, in Denver, operate five large first-run houses—the Strand, the Princess-Paramount, the Rialto, the Rivoli and the Curties. In addition they have a number of neighborhood houses in the Colorado metropolis, and a repertoire of film theatres throughout the State.

This is a definite new interest breaking into the presentation of motion pictures in New York. At this distance no particular producing affiliation seems to be contemplated.

Wesley Ruggles, who has just returned from France, as a director, and his first task will be conducting Owen Moore through a new dramatic Western. Ruggles is a brother of Charles Ruggles, well-known character actor in the legitimate.

Goldwyns want it distinctly understood that though they are fostering the "Eminent Authors," these writing distinctions furnish material only for their own production unit. They are not writing for a majority of the Goldwyn stars, and the firm is on the lookout for stories suited to the needs of Madge Kennedy, Mabel Normand, Pauline Frederick, Geraldine Farrar and Tom Moore—quite an enticing list of interpreters for authors eminent or non-eminent.

First National has acquired the Katherine MacDonald productions. This key actress, whose beauty stood out in such films as "The Squaw Man" and "The Women Thou Gavest Me," and who has additional prestige by reason of being Mary MacLaren's sister, formed her own company some time ago and completed two pictures, "The Thunderbolt" and "The Bleeders." The Exhibitors' Circuit has contracted for these and for a series of ten new ones to be delivered for release in two years.

"Eyes of Youth," Clara Kimball Young's Equity Pictures release, includes in its cast Vincent Herrero, William Courtleigh, Edmund Lowe, Anders Randolph, Sam Sothern, Gareth Hughes and Pauline Starks. The production is under the direction of Albert Parker, formerly of Douglas Fairbanks's staff.

Wally Reid started in pictures at 17, a week or so ago. He is now a day-or-to-be more accurate several days ago—Reid signed a new contract with Famous Players-Lasky for five years, by the terms of which he will receive, in his fifth year, a compensation equal to that of any male star on the screen. Incidentally he has started to work on a picture of "Hawthorne, U. S. A.," from the stage play in which Douglas Fairbanks and Irene Fenwick appeared.

Rol Cooper Meigs and Nina Wilcox Putnam have signed with Zukor's organization to do original stories. Meigs needs no further mention as a playwright, while Mrs. Putnam has a wide following for her magazine stories. It might be noted in passing that Famous Players-Lasky has more than sixty plays ready for next season.

Two fair commuters caught a train westbound Betty Blythe and Myrtle Stedman. Both will work in the east of the Rex Beach picture, "The Silver Horde," now in process of manufacture at Goldwyn's Culver City studios. Miss Stedman is one of the best-known feminine leads on the screen—she has been prominent in the Motion Picture days, and Blythe—you will remember her with Vitaphone.

We said something about Mabel Ballin in a recent paragraph. She is, right now, playing opposite Elmo, the Mighty, Lincoln in "The Beach Comber," in Los Angeles. Her Ingram is handling the megaphone.

Henry Kolker will play with Bessie Barriscale in "The Rose of Egypt." Elsie Percy, whose film activities have occupied space in these columns from time to time, has taken unto herself a new contract with the studio of Ulrich Bush, grand-nephew of Adolphus, the late brewer of St. Louis.

Tom and Frances Ring McLaughlin are in town. Tom left his strenuous stellar activities on the Coast to come East to see his mother, who is ill, in Pittsburgh. But he won't be here long, as his contract call for his services for Lasky. Just a few of his late completed appearances have been in "The Miracle Man," the Admirable Crichton, rechristened "Male and Female," and "Peg o' My Heart."

Fred Stone is finishing his vacation at Chebeague, Maine, and will return East in two weeks to reopen in "Jack o' Lantern" at Toronto. His vacation has consisted in making two film plays and raking his neck in the Frontier Days Celebration at Chebeague, where he rode bucking horses and bulldozed steers and led Wild West parades. The second picture, "The Duke of Chebeague Butte," was made on the famous Y-4 ranch near Chebeague.

After nearly a year in California, Anita Stewart is back home in Bay Shore, where she and her husband, Rudie Cameron, are resting preparatory to resuming film activities on this side of the continent. Miss Stewart's latest photoplay, "In Old Days," was made on the famous Y-4 ranch near Chebeague.

New Offerings in the Theatres

(Additional dramatic announcements for the coming week will be printed in The Evening World of Monday.)

William S. Hart will revive memories of Kit Carson in "Wagon Tracks," which will be shown at the Rivoli next week. It was written by C. Gardner Sullivan, who took the old Santa Fe trail from Kansas to New Mexico as the locale of the story. The period is about 1850. The experiences of the early pioneers bent on reaching the lands of plenty have been depicted in this tale of the early West. Mr. Hart appears as a scout and leader of the caravans. Although there is a love interest, the action deals largely with the thrill of the desert struggle against privation and marauders.

PAULINE FREDERICK
FILM STAR AT RIALTO

Pauline Frederick will be seen at the Rialto in "The Peace of Roaring River," the story, written by George Van Sloan, presents the dilemma of a finely-bred girl who yields to a desperate impulse and answers an advertisement in a paper devoted to matrimonial news. The advertisement has been inserted by the postmistress of a Western mining town in an attempt to humiliate a citizen for being blind to her charms. She carries on her correspondence with the girl in the east, with the result that the latter sells her last few pieces of jewelry to pay her way west. "Cupid's Hold Up," a Christy comedy; Major Jack Allen's adventures while lion trapping, and the when the Magnolia will be additional features. There will also be orchestral and vocal music.

AMATEUR BATHING GIRLS AT BROADWAY THEATRE

Bathing Girl Amateur Night will be a novelty Monday night at Mon's Broadway Theatre, in connection with the engagement of Mack Sennetts. Bathing Beauties, who are headed by Jane Allen and Dorothy Haver. The stage will be turned into a motion picture studio and the aspirants to movie fame will disport themselves before the camera. Other features will be Stanley Lawton's orchestra, Geraldine Karma, dancer, and "Yankee Doodle in Berlin."

"CHOOSING A WIFE"
STRAND FILM PLAY

"Choosing a Wife," a screen adaptation of the English novel "The Elder Miss Blossom," will be the principal feature at the Strand Theatre. It answers the question of whether a young and beautiful girl could attract a man of middle age more than a woman only a little younger than herself. The programme will also include a screen fantasy entitled "Sunk the Sailor," a new Outing-Chester scenic, the Topical Review and musical numbers. The new Strand Theatre in Brooklyn, the corner of Fulton Street and Rockwell Place, will open its doors on Saturday noon, Aug. 30. It will offer a programme of photo plays and music.
